

From: jmetz
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/29/02 2:23am
Subject: microsoft

Sirs i have only a few thoughts on the matters before the judge If microsoft is in actuality a monopoly as most of the tech world believes and it has manipulated the law government and its access to the hardware manufacturers there are some very simple solutions that might be implemented.

They need to be punished in a manner that would benefit disadvantaged competitors and the general public as well.

So here might be a method that would serve all the injured parties starting back from 1992 when they virtually drove Geoworks from the office and school suite business Geoworks now is under the control of www.breadbox.com had been developed as a complete operating suite and sold recently as NewDealOffice 2000 is a service system that resides on top of any DOS or Win9x NT or linux in a DOSEMU and OS/2 as a cross platform suite

If microsoft were to be forced to release both its win9x as a downloadable and its DOS as downloadable in total with the associated Knowledgebases and source codes this might enable other companies to continue development of those operating systems

If they were forced to give away mac systems with the associated versions of software to all the schools in need that would partially aid another company that had been harmed greatly

If they were to pay for the rehab of older boxes 386 486 and low end pentium units with the addition of the software suggested above for distribution in the 3rd world of central and south americas this would also solve other existing problems but those are my opinions